Top tips

Arriving at the venue

Aim to be at the venue entrance at least one hour before your session starts. If you're going by train, allow extra time for the shuttle journey from the station (around 15 minutes) and the walk to the venue entrance (15-20 minutes) – and come in comfortable footwear.

When you get to the venue, you'll be asked to go through airport-style security screening. With thousands of visitors arriving at the same time, there may be a queue.

One soft-sided bag is allowed per person – for example, a medium-sized handbag or small backpack (maximum 25 litres).

We want everyone to have a safe and enjoyable Games, so there are some things you can't bring into the venue. Go to london2012.com/security for the full list, which includes water and other liquids.

If you have a seated ticket, please make your way to the stands once you've gone through security screening (around 10-minute walk). Or if you have a standing ticket, head to the spectator viewing area to catch some live action on the big screen (15-20 minute walk). Speak to a member of staff if you have any accessibility needs.

There's no readmission to the venue.

Games Mobility

Inside the venue you can use our free Games Mobility service, which loans out mobility vehicles on a first come, first served basis. Audio description and guiding are also available. Find out more at london2012.com/accessibility

The history

Although its history dates back centuries, Rowing only came of age as a competitive sport in the last 200 years. It has featured at every Games since making its debut on the Olympic programme at Paris 1900.

Did you know?

The youngest ever Olympic champion is thought to be a French boy who coxed for a Dutch pair at the first Rowing competition at Paris 1900. The boy, aged no more than 12, took part in the Victory Ceremony – but then was never seen again!

The basics

The 14 Olympic Rowing events, for men and women, range from the Single Sculls, featuring solo rowers, to the Eight, contested by teams of eight rowers plus a cox. All events are held over a 2,000 metre course, with the competition taking a total of eight days.

All Rowing events at London 2012 begin with the heats, from which the best boats will qualify for the next round. Boats that do not qualify automatically from the heats get a second chance to qualify through the repechage round. The best boats eventually progress through the various stages and into the finals of each event, which decide the medallists.
